How the Young Doctor Profited by the Lesson

THEN the old doctor met the young physician who used to be his assistant he inquired bow he was prospering. The young man poured out a tale of woe and said be had very few patients, and they never paid their bills. Whereupon the old man told him to cheer up and all would come out right in the end.

"And by all means," cautioned the veteran medico, "do not be so candid that the recording angel keeps a large and police, in anti-lewish excesses. sponge with which to wipe out the white lies young doctors employ in telling the laity about the large practices they enjoy."

A few weeks later the old man again met the young physician and asked bim how he was getting along. The young doctor at once began to rattle off a list of cases be was treating which far egceeded that under the care of half a dosen medical men who had been in the business for many years. The old man listened patiently until the young doctor subsided, when he remarked:

"But I didn't tell you to lie to me."-New York Press.

"Where am dat brudder of yo'rs?" "He dun gone cuttin' sticks, pop." "Dar, now; dat's a negro all over! Why don't you correct your grammar and say he am ampertatin' timber, and talk like de white folks?"

Honors Were Even. A prominent railroad man repeats with great enjoyment a story that he had from a conductor on one of the and the west.

It appears that a dapper chap in the first chair car had managed to become unusually friendly with an attractive young woman in an adjoining seat. When the train pulled into Buffalo the masher, in taking leave of the fair one, remarked:

"Do you know, I must thank you for an awf'lly, awf'lly pleasant time, but Do you feel inclined to smoke?-I'm afraid you wouldn't have been so Now this isn't any jokenice to me had you known that I was a married man.

"Oh, as to that," quickly and pleasantly responded the charming young woman, "you haven't the least advantage of me. I am an escaped lunatic." -St. Louis Republic.

Trade Advantages.

Sorrows of the Rich.

"It was too bad that he had to go." said the lady who had called to offer her sympathy to the widow, "but such things have to be. Sooner or later each of us must obey the call."

"Yes," replied the sorrowing one, "b-but Henry was such a good hand at and everybody 'll know what he left, And think of the way the assessors 'll soak it to us the next chance they get!"-Chicago Record-Herald.
